TRUMP SAYS TRAVEL BAN IS KEY FOR SECURITY

1 President Donald Trump cast his travel ban on people from seven Muslim-majority countries as a key element of national security, hours before a federal appeals court is set to consider his most divisive action since taking office last month. The Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco is to hear arguments later in the day from Justice Department lawyers and opposing attorneys for the states of Washington and Minnesota about whether to restore the ban. "I actually can't believe that we're having to fight to protect the security, in a court system, to protect the security of our nation," Trump said at an event with sheriffs at the White House on Tuesday. REUTERS

ARMY TO GRANT FINAL PERMIT FOR PIPELINE

2 A The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will grant the final easement needed to finish the controversial Dakota Access Pipeline. The line had been delayed for several months after protests from Native American tribes and climate activists. The $3.8 billion line, which is being built by Energy Transfer Partners needed a final permit to tunnel under Lake Oahe, a reservoir that is part of the Missouri River. The Standing Rock Sioux tribe, whose reservation is adjacent to the line's route, has said it will fight the decision. The Army Corps had previously stated that it would undertake further environmental review of the project. The 1,170-mile line will bring crude oil from North Dakota's Bakken shale region to Patoka, Illinois, and from there connect to the Gulf of Mexico, where many U.S. refineries are located. REUTERS

'THIS-YEAR PRIORITY': REVAMPING DODD-FRANK

3 The chairman of the U.S. Financial Services Committee told CNBC on Tuesday that revamping the 2010 Dodd-Frank Wall Street reform law remained a "this-year priority" for President Donald Trump, Vice President Mike Pence and House Speaker Paul Ryan. Republican Rep. Jeb Hensarling said he would soon reintroduce his legislation that gives banks a choice between complying with Dodd-Frank and holding more capital. While the bill is expected to easily pass the Republican-led House, it will face resistance in the Senate, where Democrats hold enough seats to filibuster. Pence can cast votes to break ties on legislation. REUTERS

SYRIA EXECUTES 13,000 AT MILITARY PRISON

4 The Syrian government executed up to 13,000 prisoners in mass hangings and carried out systematic torture at a military jail near Damascus, rights watchdog Amnesty International said. Amnesty said the executions took place between 2011 and 2015, but were probably still being carried out and amounted to war crimes. It called for a further investigation by the United Nations, which produced a report last year with similar accusations also based on extensive witness testimonies. Syria's government and President Bashar al-Assad have rejected similar reports in the past of torture and extrajudicial killings in a civil war that has claimed hundreds of thousands of lives. The Amnesty report said an average of 20 to 50 people were hanged each week at the Sednaya military prison north of Damascus. REUTERS

Applications for BYOB became available Monday. PIXABAY

Boston opens BYOB applications to select restaurants

Permits allowing customers to bring wine and beer will be given to small establishments in more offbeat neighborhoods.

ERIN TIERNAN
@ErinTiernan
erin.tiernan@metro.us

BYOB is coming to Boston restaurants.

Businesses can apply for licenses allowing customers to bring their own alcohol, a move expected to give smaller eateries in some of the city's less fashionable neighborhoods a competitive edge.

"For the first time in our city's history, restaurants are allowed to take advantage of BYOB," Mayor Marty Walsh said. "This measure will bring increased economic opportunity to Boston's neighborhood restaurants and help our city's economic growth overall."

The permits, which cost $400 a year, will only be available to restaurants in Allston-Brighton, Charlestown, Dorchester, East Boston, Hyde Park, Jamaica Plain, Mattapan, Mission Hill, Roslindale, Roxbury, West Roxbury and some parts of South Boston, and only for restaurants with 30 seats or less.

Diners will be limited to beer, wine and malt beverages, and BYOB hours will be restricted, from 5 to 11 p.m.

"For the first time in our city's history, restaurants are allowed to take advantage of BYOB."
Mayor Marty Walsh

The going rate for a full-liquor license in Boston is about $400,000, so the BYOB license was designed to cater to smaller establishments in Boston neighborhoods that don't get as much foot traffic.

Restaurants in the Downtown, North End, South End, Bay Village, Fenway, Chinatown, Seaport, West End, Beacon Hill and Back Bay are not eligible.

"I'm excited to see Boston officially open license applications for BYOB, creating a new way for neighborhood restaurants to thrive and more options for consumers to dine local," City Council President Michelle Wu said. The council and Boston Licensing Board worked to hammer out the measure.

Boston restaurant owners have lobbied for BYOB privileges for several years and the city's licensing board approved it last month.

Restaurants must file an application with the city online, and owners must appear before the licensing board at a hearing before a permit is approved.

Boston Public Library holds lottery to let 6 couples marry at iconic spot for free

Couples with strong ties to Boston or Massachusetts are encouraged to apply.

Planning a wedding can be overwhelming, but the Boston Public Library will be making the process a lot easier for a few lucky couples.

The library announced this week an online lottery that will give six couples a chance to exchange their vows in the courtyard at the Central Library for free.

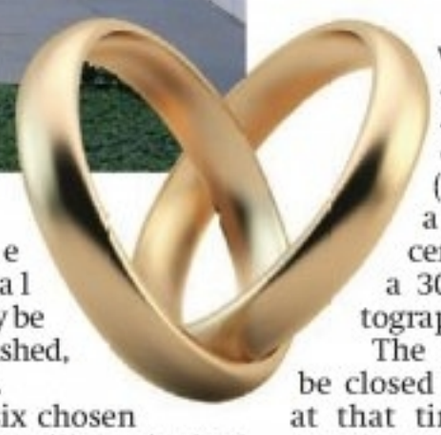
Wedding hopefuls can enter at bpl.org/ceremonygiveaway through March 12; the couples will be randomly selected and told of their wedding location by March 13.

"Long a much sought-after wedding venue, this initiative offers everyone, regardless of economic capacity, a chance to have Boston Public Library be a part of their lives on this special occasion," Davis Leonard, president of the BPL, said in a statement. "We hope to see many applicants with a strong Boston or Massachusetts connection apply."

The iconic outdoor courtyard at the Copley location features a fountain, lush greens and plenty of picturesque archways. The backdrop for wedding photos isn't all that's included — bouquets and boutonnieres will be provided, along with ceremony music, a light breakfast and beverage compliments of The Catered Affair and a wedding officiant, Thomas A. Welch, of justice of the peace.

"We hope to see many applicants with a strong Boston or Massachusetts connection apply."

Davis Leonard



The special day may be a bit rushed, though.

All six chosen couples will be invited to the library on the morning of Sunday, June 11, to exchange their vows, with about an hour allotted for each couple (including a 15-minute ceremony and a 30-minute photography session).

The building will be closed to the public at that time and each couple can bring eight guests. To enter, you must be at least 18 years old.

MBTA cutting obstructed bus stops

Up to 133 stops could close.

"Because the truth is these stops are no safer for someone who is physically very able than for someone who isn't."
Stephanie Pollack

A map presented to the MBTA Control Board shows the location of bus stops deemed critical. MBTA

Light gymnastics and dodging traffic are not part of the typical boarding procedure for MBTA commuters, but after a comprehensive review the transit agency identified 133 bus stops where that might be required.

A review of roughly 7,600 bus stops throughout the sprawling system identified 209 — or just under 3 percent — where there is no accessible path to board from a sidewalk so that passengers must get on and off the bus in the street.

Laura Brelsford, the assistant general manager for systemwide accessibility, said 133 of those stops are "very strong candidates for elimination," with 99 percent of them serving less than 10 riders per day.

One example of a "critical" bus stop that Brelsford showed the T's Fiscal and Management Control Board on Monday is on Walnut Street in Saugus, where the bus stop sign is behind a guardrail next to a body of water and riders must board on the road's shoulder. Another in Somerville is also barricaded by a guardrail on busy Mystic Avenue.

Brelsford said the MBTA plans to reach out to municipalities where the stops are located to determine whether there are reasons to keep them in place, and she said changes wouldn't be made until this summer. Another 100 stops have yet to be surveyed.

"This is a great example of how when we set out to help our customers with differing abilities we help all our customers," said Transportation Secretary Stephanie Pollack. "Because the truth is these stops are no safer for someone who is physically very able than for someone who isn't."

Pollack emphasized that eliminating the stops would not amount to a service cut as riders would be able to switch to another stop within 750 feet of the stop proposed for elimination.

Buses serve more customers in total than any individual train line, according to MBTA data. In fiscal 2015, there were roughly 113 million MBTA bus trips, compared to about 88 million on the Red Line — the busiest subway line.

Transportation officials were unsure how bus stops wound up with guardrails shielding access to the buses.

"Our riders' guess is as good as anyone's," Brelsford told the News Service. "We know a lot of those bus stops have been in place for decades. My guess is that signs went up first; guardrails went up second and nobody thought to raise the issue."

The survey also showed about half of the bus stops are within 25 feet of a crossing, 8 percent have a shelter and 7 percent have an unsheltered bench.

Madonna adopts twin girls from Malawi

Madonna just added two new baby girls to her brood.

The 58-year-old singer has adopted 4-year-old twins from Malawi, according to Yahoo News. The toddlers are from the Home of Hope orphanage in Mchinji.

A couple of weeks ago, Madonna denied that she was adopting, insisting that she was only in Malawi to check in on her foundation, Raising Malawi. But I guess she just didn't want the press in her business, which honestly is a new move for the pop star. Y'all know how Madonna is always trying to start something. Remember her speech at the Women's March?

This, of course, isn't the first time she's adopted from Malawi. The two toddlers will join Madonna's adopted son David and daughter Mercy James, both age 11 and adopted in 2008 and 2009, respectively. She also has a 16-year-old son, Rocco, with ex-husband Guy Ritchie, and 20-year-old daughter Lourdes with ex Carlos Leon.

That's a whole lot of kids for a woman pushing 60. Good luck, girl.

Lena Dunham is on a Trump diet

Another day, another ignorant pull quote from y'all's fave.

Many people have noticed that Lena Dunham has recently lost some weight. She went on Howard Stern and revealed it's just part of the Trump diet she's been on these last few months.

According to People, The "Girls" creator and star stopped by Stern to drop some of her anecdotes that we all know and love so very much. "Donald Trump became president and I stopped being able to eat food," explained the 30-year-old. "Everyone's been asking like, 'What have you been doing?' And I'm like, 'Try soul-crushing pain and devastation and hopelessness and you, too, will lose weight.'"

Ah, classic Dunham. I cherish her ability to make everything about her. Her chronic narcissism is just one of those things I can rely on in these trying times.

Gigi Hadid accused of racism

They say ignorance is bliss. But honestly? Ignorance is just ignorance.

Over the weekend, Bella Hadid shared a video of sister Gigi that some people — including me — are quite offended by. In the video, 21-year-old Gigi is shown giggling and squinting at a birthday dinner, holding up a cookie with a Buddha's face on it.

Bella quickly deleted the post, which should tell you something, but we all know that nothing on the internet ever dies.

In Gigi's head, to be fair, I'm sure she's not thinking about how she's mocking an entire race for her own benefit. She's just hanging out with her girls, having a good time, basking in her ignorance! You know, just being a cool kid or whatever.

Us Weekly notes that Twitter wasn't so kind to Gigi, with many people calling the video disrespectful, offensive and racist.

Then for some reason Gigi's mother, "Real Housewives of Beverly Hills" star Yolanda Foster, came to her defense, proving that ignorance is just a cool trait that runs in the family.

"Only a toxic mind will perceive hugging a chocolate laughing Buddha as racist..... #PracticeHappiness #PracticeKindness," Foster wrote on Twitter.

Christie Brinkley stuns in the SI Swimsuit Issue

Christie Brinkley posed for the upcoming Sports Illustrated Swimsuit Issue, and she looks fantastic. Sports Illustrated posted the gorgeous photo on Instagram, saying "Christie Brinkley is BACK in SI Swimsuit ... and this time she's bringing her daughters!"

In the post, the 63-year-old model poses alongside daughters Alexa Ray Joel and Sailor Brinkley Cook in a black mesh one-piece.

What an insanely genetically blessed family. May we all look this dang good in a flimsy swimsuit made of baskeball netting at age 63. It's probably not going to happen, but a girl can dream.

Rosie O'Donnell volunteers to play Steve Bannon on 'SNL'

Comedian Rosie O'Donnell took to Twitter to let her fans know she's willing and able. "I am here to serve — Alec has Trump — Melissa has Spice — I would need a few days to prepare — so if called — I will be ready," she wrote. Not sure what all of those dashes are about, but I guess you don't need to be able to write proper sentences to play Steve Bannon anyway. The former "View" host seems to have been inspired by Melissa McCarthy's portrayal of Press Secretary Sean Spicer. And it probably helps that she and Donald Trump have been in an epic feud for decades. According to Entertainment Weekly, Trump famously insulted O'Donnell during the Republican debates, and in 2006 called her "a woman out of control." Sigh. Trump was silent after last week's "SNL," but if O'Donnell visits Studio 8H, I am very sure he'll have something to say.

Andrew Rannells: Elijah thinks he's star of 'Girls'

Actor discusses his character's disarming ego.

@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

Andrew Rannells plays Elijah, Hannah's gay ex-boyfriend and current roommate/bestie on "Girls." CRAIG BLANKENHORN/HBO

Elijah is, low-key, our favorite character on "Girls." Played by acclaimed Broadway actor Andrew Rannells ("Book of Mormon," "Hamilton," "Falsettos"), Hannah's gay ex-boyfriend and current roommate/bestie provides much-needed comic relief and a respite from the girls' drama.

The 38-year-old actor, who lives in New York City by way of Omaha, Nebraska, talks with us ahead of "Girls" final season (starting Sunday, Feb. 12), about snorting fake cocaine with Lena Dunham and how his sassy character really believes this show is about him.

So, Elijah got his heart broken at the end of last season.

Majorly. We left him in not the best place. He was getting drunk with Loreen [Hannah's mom, played by actress Becky Ann Baker] on the street. Maybe not his finest moment.

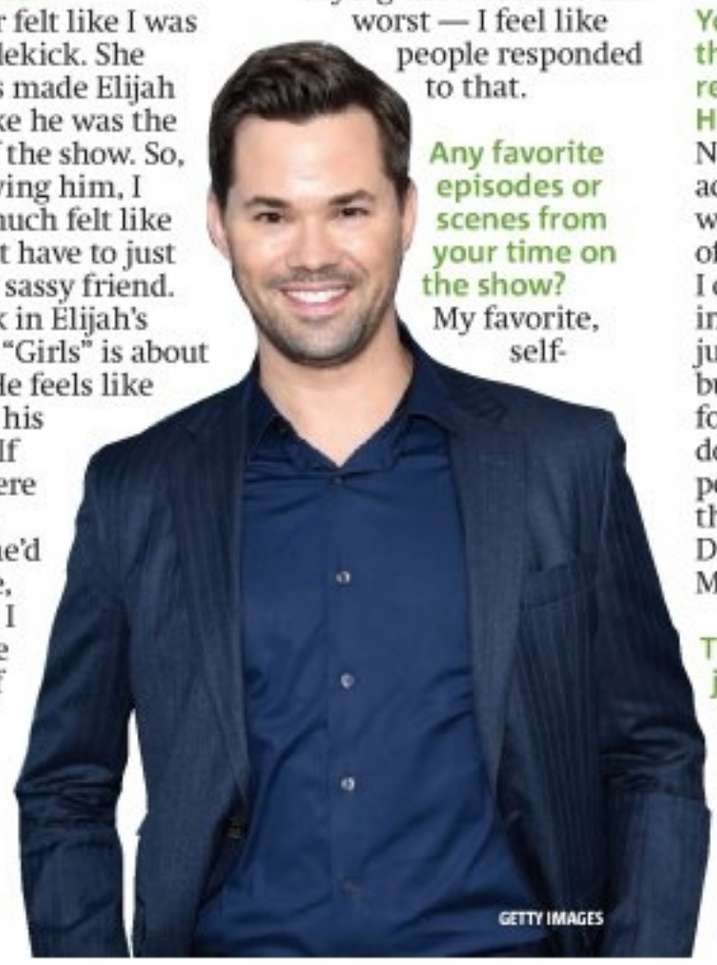
I was very proud of that story line, and that Corey Stoll joined us for it, because it was really nice to show that side of Elijah, that he does aspire to have more, to have a relationship.

The Elijah-Hannah dynamic manages to avoid the trope of the stock gay-best-friend character.

I never felt like I was her sidekick. She always made Elijah feel like he was the star of the show. So, in playing him, I very much felt like I didn't have to just be the sassy friend. I think in Elijah's mind, "Girls" is about him. He feels like this is his show. If you were to ask him, he'd be like, "Well, I am the lead of 'Girls' and all these girls operate around me." And that's how they wrote it. Every scene he's in, he's taking charge and being an a—hole.

His narcissism somehow doesn't bother me as much as it does with other characters, like Jessa or Marnie.

I know, people have said that to me. I wonder why, because I find him to be just as unlikable in some ways. But I do feel like I had a very specific role in getting to somehow be the voice of the audience. To tell the [girls] off, or say things about them that the audience was thinking: calling them selfish, saying that Marnie's the worst — I feel like people responded to that.



GETTY IMAGES

Any favorite episodes or scenes from your time on the show?

My favorite, self-ishly, was getting to do cocaine off a toilet seat with Lena [Season 2, Episode 3, "Bad Friend"]. That whole experience, Lena and I getting to run around the city and act like idiots, and do fake cocaine. Such a funny script and such a crazy episode.

How do you do "fake cocaine"?

It was vitamin B powder. I do remember there was a weird placebo effect of lining it up and doing it. And because it was vitamin B, you'd get a little rush from it. We did start to feel high at a certain point. It was silly fun.

You might get asked this a lot, but who is Corey Stoll's character, Dill Harcourt, based on?

No one asks me that, actually — I don't know why. I think he's a version of a lot of people. For me, I certainly dated people in my mid-20s who were just a little out of reach, but I thought I was ready for it, but I couldn't quite do it. I feel like a lot of people have that guy in their past. Their Mr. Big. Dill Harcourt was Elijah's Mr. Big.

That would fit with Elijah's delusion that he's the star of "Girls."

Yep, he's Carrie. It's less that he's the Hannah. I think he thinks that he's Carrie Bradshaw. [Laughs]

The unexpected collaborations that will rock this year's Grammy Awards.

letters@metro.us

Between Brexit, Donald Trump and Lochtegate, you could definitely say that 2016 was the year when things got weird — and music was no exception.

This year's Grammy nominations include tons of crossover collaborations between some of the unlikeliest artists in the music industry. For the days when you feel like exploring some genre-bending songs, here are some of the most unexpected (and for the most part, exhilarating) music pairings to come out of past year.

"Forgive Me Father"

DJ Khaled ft. Meghan Trainor
Nomination: DJ Khaled's "Major Key" for Best Rap Album

The Snapchat king's ninth album includes guest appearances from some of the biggest names in hip-hop, but it also includes a track with one of the wildest trios we've ever heard of: Wiz Khalifa, Wale and Meghan Trainor. Lending her softer vocals to the hook, the "All About That Bass" singer proves she can break out of doo-wop pop through this inspirational closing track about redemption and religion.

"Don't Hurt Yourself"

Beyoncé ft. Jack White
Nomination: Best Rock Performance

This song helped Beyoncé make Grammy history — not only is she nominated for the most number of Grammys this year (a whopping nine awards), but she's also the first artist in history to earn nominations across the pop, rock, R&B and rap categories all in the same year. Supported by White Stripes frontman Jack White, Beyoncé made her bold debut into the realm of rock n' roll with "Don't Hurt Yourself," a Led Zeppelin-inspired track that makes for a killer feminist anthem.

"Setting the World on Fire"

Kenny Chesney ft. P!nk
Nomination: Best Country Duo/ Group Performance

\We never thought that country singer Kenny Chesney would perform a romantic duet with a female pop rocker like P!nk — but somehow it works. The feel-good song off of Chesney's album "Cosmic Hallelujah" starts with some laid back acoustic guitar, but all bets are off once P!nk comes onto the scene, transforming the song into a more rock-influenced piece with louder chords and a brief electric guitar solo.

"Jolene"

Pentatonix ft. Dolly Parton
Nomination: Best Country Duo/ Group Performance

Plenty of artists have covered Parton's classic 1973 single "Jolene," but none do so quite as masterfully as a cappella group Pentatonix. Combine Parton's vocals with the pop group's beatboxing, harmonizing and clapping, and you get a refreshing rendition of the song that definitely merits a Grammy nod.

"Leave Me Lonely"

Ariana Grande ft. Macy Gray
Nomination: Best Pop Vocal Album

R&B veteran Macy Gray and pop diva Ariana Grande team up on this bluesy tune that effortlessly highlights both artists' signature vocal styles, combining Gray's raspy crooning with Grande's powerful belts and riffs. The jazzy piano chords, heavy percussion and gospel backing make "Leave Me Lonely" hauntingly beautiful, easily distinguishing it as the standout track on Grande's "Dangerous Woman."

Common gets to fight Keanu Reeves in "John Wick: Chapter 2." NIKO TAVERNISE

Common wants balance

The rapper-actor talks about working on the fun "John Wick" and the serious "13th."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

On his albums, Common is compassionate, thoughtful, gentle. In "John Wick: Chapter 2" he's a brutal, fearsome killer. The rapper-actor contains multitudes; just witness the two fight scenes he has with Keanu Reeves. The latter returns as the super-assassin reluctantly lured out of retirement. This time, John Wick is pursued by most of NYC's killers for hire, including one played by Common. But making the sequel wasn't only about pain; Common got to go to Italy, learn a little Italian, as well as shoot in New York, his favorite city in the world — no knock on his hometown of Chicago, his "most enduring and loved city," he tells us.

Your two big fights are intense, especially since they're the toughest ones you've ever done on-screen before.

I'm happy to do it. My first conversation with Chad Stahelski [the director], I said, "I want to be the Muhammad Ali of this. I want to be one of the greats." I mean, I won't be the greatest. But when it comes to fighting in films, I want to be high-level.

Among other things, this movie offers a great escape from the world, even if you know you have to return to it.

I was talking to someone who said, "Some days I want to change the world, and some days I want to escape from the world." I feel that, too. If "John Wick: Chapter 2" will let me escape, and will be fun and of high quality, that's what I want to see.

Experts are talking about the importance of unplugging now and then, allowing your brain to rest from the news.

Exactly. It's like anything in life: You don't want to overload. You can take it in, then you go other places. Some days you need to be outside and enjoy things, and other days you have to go into the office and handle your business.

I'm grateful to be a part of "John Wick: Chapter 2," but I'm also grateful to be a part of "13th."

That would make a good double feature: Go see escapist fun, then go on Netflix and watch Ava DuVernay's documentary about history you might not know.

Yeah, man. That's what helps us become well-rounded individuals. None of us can be serious all the time, or party all the time. I love to take on roles like this because it gives me a chance to show the diaspora of who I am, the depths of who I am as an actor. I'm looking for even greater roles, to show more aspects of myself.

GETTY IMAGES

The future

Are there any kinds of roles in particularly you're looking for?

I'm definitely looking for dynamic characters, powerful characters that have many sides to them. I'm also open to playing superheroes, though they'd have to have some soul to them, some depth. I'm open to play someone real, like Gil Scott-Heron, who was a musician who was conflicted, or a lawyer who's dealing with lots of different things. I like to show the range and dynamics of who we are as humans.

I would love to see a Gil Scott-Heron film.

I'm producing films now, and that's one I'd love to do.

Would you play him as well?

I would love to play him. "The Revolution Will Not Be Televised," "The Bottle," "We Almost Lost Detroit" — these are songs that have impacted me. His voice has meant something to me as an artist. He was a beautiful human being who had his own fallacies he was battling. I have my own issues I fight with. Everyone does.

Cambridge Colonial boasts privacy, aesthetic

The Joseph Thorp House is for sale for $9.5 million.

ERIN TIERNAN
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

To take a step through the doorway of the Joseph Thorp House is to take a step into the heart of Colonial revivalism.

Designed by Arthur Little in 1888 this Cambridge home is a highly unconventional, outstanding and eclectic masterpiece.

With a sympathetic nod to the Queen Anne style, asymmetry abounds, yet all facades are active with neoclassical elements like columns, pilasters, bays and balconies with delicate balustrades, scrolled corbels and keystone arches.

Every inch of the home's eclectic interior invokes all classical orders of design including Greco-Roman details and an intricately carved teak salon by the American Aesthetic Movement's Lockwood de Forest.

In the southeast corner, the library incorporates late-19th century Norwegian design with a traditional "peasant" hearth. The truly classical dining room incorporates a Palladian bay of leaded glass and an intimate "poet's corner" adorned with bas-relief on walls, domed ceiling and mantel delights.

The French country kitchen houses the original Walker & Pratt cast-iron stove, a modern prep island, subzero refrigerators and Five-Star range.

Five times the fun

Hundreds of thousands of Patriots fans lined the streets of downtown Boston on Tuesday to celebrate the team's fifth Super Bowl victory.

Pats parade nothing but sloppy fun

Snow and rain didn't stop the Patriots and their fans from partying Tuesday.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

There were plenty of anti-Roger Goodell signs in the sea of fans in Boston on Tuesday. GETTY IMAGES

The fifth Patriots Super Bowl victory parade had it all.

"Brady! Brady! Brady!" chants began erupting well before the 11 a.m. start to the near three-hour-long celebration through the streets of downtown Boston on Tuesday. A work scaffold with a sign that read "Falcon Construction" had fans — lined eight-10 rows deep by Boston Common — chanting, "Tear it down!"

The streets reeked of marijuana.

Snow turned to rain, and then the rain disappeared just as confetti began to fall on the heads of Patriots players and fans.

Julian Edelman, who was the star of the show in the parade two years ago by taking his shirt off and standing on top of a duck boat, kept it relatively tame this year. Pats players were clearly told to not risk life and limb this time around, though Chris Long did climb on top of one duck boat and swam like a fish to the front. Not surprisingly, Rob Gronkowski was highly active throughout the parade.

"He was chugging beer in front of everybody and then would spike the cans," said Jeff, 24, from Providence. "Even though he's wasn't on the field much this year, he's still the man."

The inclement weather did work out to the benefit of some, as many schools canceled classes for the day.

"At 5:30 this morning we woke up to our superintendent saying it was a snow day, so I put my Pats gear on, bundled up and came to this for the Patriots," said Lisa, 25, a teacher from Andover.

The parade, which began at Hynes Convention Center, did not roll past the Tremont Street portion of Boston Common until around 12:20 p.m., but fans were not disappointed when their Super Bowl LI heros finally arrived.

"We got here at 9:30 a.m. and waited in the rain for three hours … totally f—ing worth it," said Jessica, 25, from Methuen. "They worked as hard as we worked to watch them in the parade. So worth it."

Were you nervous when the Pats were down 28-3?

"Nervous, yes. But you never doubted the team. They've got the best QB, the best coach of all-time. They're always capable of a 25-point comeback."

Jeff, 24, Providence

"I started cleaning the kitchen I was so nervous,"

Lisa, 25, Andover

"I was s—ing my pants at halftime. I literally could not watch Lady Gaga because … well, it was a weird f—ing situation. Everyone was freaking out, but I kept saying, 'It's not over 'til it's over. Do your job.'"

Jessica, 25, Methuen

B's hope for wake-up call after Julien firing

The Bruins fired the longest-tenured head coach in the NHL Tuesday.

RICH SLATE
@RichSlate
sports@metro.us

Every head coach or manager in professional sports has an expiration date, it just so happens that the Bruins felt like Tuesday was the time to let Claude Julien go after 10 years in charge (he was the longest-tenured head coach in the NHL, by far).

The timing of the move was rough since it came at the exact time that the Patriots were getting ready to celebrate their fifth Super Bowl title with a rolling rally through the streets of Boston. General manager Don Sweeney claimed in his press conference that he didn't want to "overshadow (the Patriots) or "mute his decision," but that is rather doubtful since they had the last few years to dump Julien.

So, how did it get this bad for Boston's all-time winningest head coach who brought them a Stanley Cup in 2011, back to the Finals in 2013 and a Presidents' Trophy in 2014? The Bruins (26-23-6) have been in a self-induced fog for much of this campaign, not to mention the last few seasons when a potential playoff spot has usually come down to the last game. The hope is that interim head coach Bruce Cassidy — who was brought on as an assistant last year and used to be the Providence Bruins' head coach — can spark the club as they try to secure a playoff bid this spring.

"Expectations have not changed," noted Sweeney. "We expect the players to make a push and get into the playoffs."

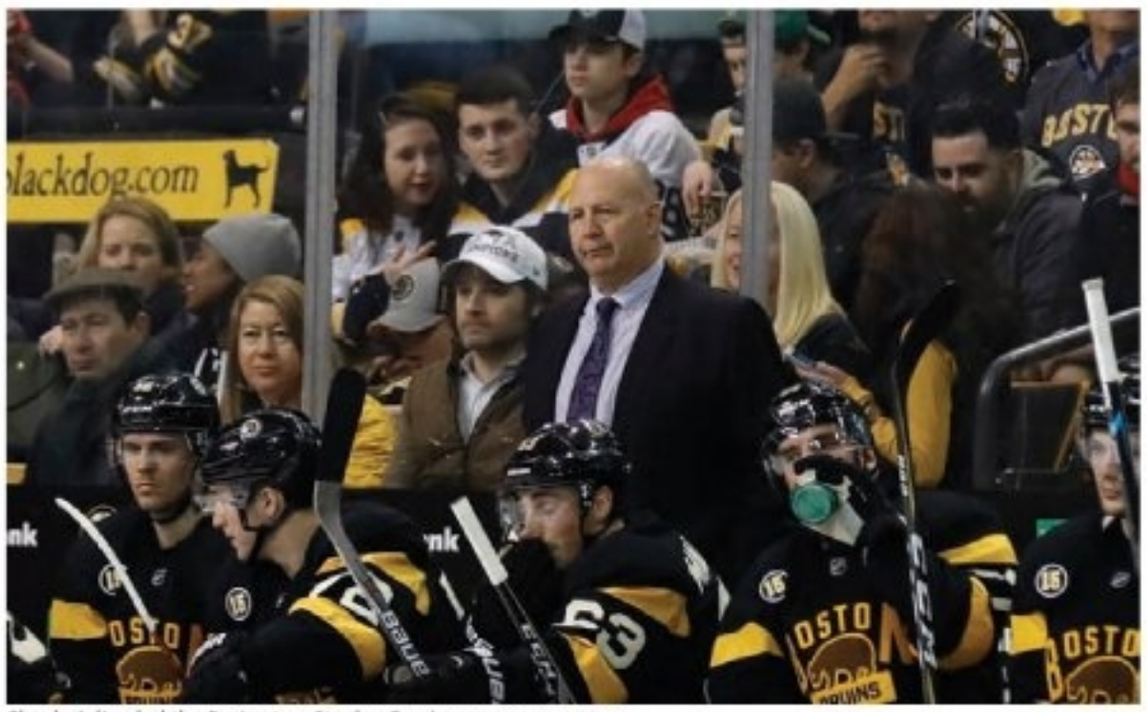
In many ways, this was the only real move that Sweeney could make — at least during the season. It's easy to blame the players, who deserve more than their fair share of the blame for this mess, but the team is hamstrung at the moment with the trade deadline approaching and the belief that they can still make a run.

"It's frustrating in here, because this is avoidable if we would have done our jobs," admitted left wing Brad Marchand after practice on Tuesday.

Defenseman Torey Krug added: "Obviously it's a wake-up call to all of the players in here."

He would never say it in public but in many ways, Julien is probably happy to start over somewhere else. There are plenty of holes on the current Bruins' roster (particularly on the back end, which his is specialty) so now he gets to sit back (with two years left on his contract at $2.5 million per year) and choose his next destination. Make no mistake, in a market suddenly filled with other solid head coaches like Gerard Gallant and Ken Hitchcock, Julien's name goes right to the top of the list. Who knows, maybe he'll be the first head coach for the Las Vegas Knights who begin play next fall in the Western Conference?

Cassidy (who coached the Capitals in 2002-04) will have 27 games to prove worthy of a full off-season, training camp and 2017-18 regular season instead of the Bruins going out and finding another guy to be their head coach. No pressure, right? In Providence, he had coached Krug, Colin Miller, Kevan Miller, Joe Morrow, David Pastrnak, Ryan Spooner and Frank Vatrano.



Claude Julien led the Bruins to a Stanley Cup in 2011. GETTY IMAGES

DIAGNOSE CTE
Research Project

Volunteers Needed

Chronic Traumatic Encephalopathy (CTE) is a brain disease associated with repetitive hits to the head, such as those experienced in football and other contact sports. It results in changes in thinking and memory, mood, and behavior, as well as dementia. Currently, CTE can only be diagnosed after death.

The DIAGNOSE CTE Research Project is a major study (funded by the National Institutes of Health) to develop methods of diagnosing CTE during life and to examine risk factors for the disease.

In addition to former NFL players and former college football players, the research study is recruiting healthy volunteers who have not played football or other contact sports.

You may eligible for this study if you:

- Are male between 45 and 74 years old
- Have NO history of participation in organized contact sports or brain injury

Participation requires a 3-day extensive visit to Boston University School of Medicine.

All travel expenses are covered. You may receive up to $500 compensation.

Aries Emotions will be difficult to control. Overreacting or doing something impulsive will cause problems within important relationships. Think before you speak.

Taurus Get together with friends or relatives or do something that will inspire you to begin a creative project. Don't let uncertainty interfere with your beliefs or lifestyle.

Gemini Think before you take on too much or let your emotions interfere with an important matter. Don't feel that you have to part with your cash to impress someone.

Cancer You'll be impulsive and excessive if you let your emotions take control. Separate yourself from any situation that may cost you emotionally, financially or physically.

Leo Refuse to let anyone upset you. Emotions will get in the way of good judgment. Stay focused on yourself and being the best you can be. Charm will help you.

Virgo Emotions must be dealt with sensibly. You can feel sorry for someone, but don't take on problems that don't belong to you, or you will be blamed for meddling.

Libra A change of plans will play in your favor. If you take the path of least resistance, you will have time left over to spend enjoyably with a loved one.

Scorpio Step outside your comfort zone. You will discover something interesting about who you are and what you are capable of doing. Don't hesitate to experiment.

Sagittarius If you put some muscle behind the changes you want to make at home, you will accomplish them. Emotional interference will arise if you go over budget.

Capricorn Uncertainty must not be allowed to lead you into a vulnerable situation. Face whatever comes your way head-on, so that you can go about your business.

Aquarius Refuse to get caught up in someone else's dilemma. Acknowledge what others do, but proceed down a path that will ensure your happiness and success.

Pisces Offer to help others, you will create good karma. What you put out, you will get back. Kindness and consideration will suffice, so don't be indulgent. EUGENIA LAST
